Mayor of Tresco is Host to Aviators; Two Will Carry
Mail to London

TRESCO, Schilly Islands, Oct. 11.—(INS)—The sturdy Bellanca monoplane Columbia, which in its second trip across the North Atlantic brought Capt. J. Errol Boyd and Lieut. Harry P. Connor safely to land on this westernmost extremity of the British Isles, will resume its flight today.

The intertidal fliers narrowly escaped a plunge into the sea with their machine when a clogged gasoline feed-line crippled the motor within 30 miles of Land's End, barely allowing them to glide the last two or three miles to a perfect landing on Sunday Beach here after 23 hours and 40 minutes in the air. They hopped off from Harbor Grace, N. F., at 11:29 a. m., New York time, Thursday.

Slow communication facilities prevented speedy transmission of the success of the trans-Atlantic hop to the mainland for nearly three hours. Because the plane had been unheard of and unsighted for 17 hours, some anxiety had been felt for the safety of the aviators, who dared the vast ocean expanse without radio facilities.

The hazards of the 2,300 mile dash and its sudden perils were described by the aviators to the Mayor of Tresco, who reviewed the account for International News Service after his guests, tired and sleepy after their long battle against the elements, retired for a night's rest.

"After leaving Newfoundland," the Mayor quoted Captain Boyd as saying, "we encountered rough weather which grew quite a bit worse and finally developed into conditions little short of a hurricane during the late afternoon and night Thursday.

"Despite the fact that the dangerous part of the flight was made in the darkness, and that we were unable to check our course by sighting steamers, Lieutenant Connor's magnificent navigation was never faulty and it brought the Columbia through without hesitation or confusion as to our whereabouts.

"The wind forced us about 150 miles south of the intended course and so we approached Tresco from the southwest. Only for the fact that we had a slight oil spray and trouble with the gas feed lines, we would have gone to Croydon and arrived there in time for dinner. As it is, we are happy enough to accept the kind hospitality of the Mayor here."

The fliers, in their final hop to London, will carry a special bag of Tresco mail, the first American aviators to transport British mail, from one group of islands to another within the empire.

Two Youthful Boys Admit Turning In False Fire Alarm

Two boys, one 11 and the other 12 years of age, are being held under $300 bail each for court there to answer to the charge of turning in a false fire alarm.

The firemen last night were called to box 44, Jefferson avenue, and Mansion street. When the apparatus arrived no one was at the box and there was no fire in the vicinity.

The alarm box is on a pole directly beneath a street light and in front of a store. No one saw anyone at the box.

Both the police and firemen and Constable Crawford questioned children of the neighborhood and finally information was obtained to the effect that two boys, Frank Serri, 12, 902 Jefferson avenue and Tony Messina, 11, 916 Spring street, had turned in the alarm.

The boys were taken to police headquarters and kept overnight and questioned. Finally they confessed that they were guilty.

Serri confessed to pulling the alarm after Tony had opened the door of the alarm box and the glass was out of the door and this made it easy to open. The boys said that they stood in front of the box, read the directions and then did as the directions instructed.

The boys were given a hearing this morning before Justice James Guy.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Morrisville Opens New High School Gymnasium With Assembly

OTHER COUNTY NOTES

The first assembly in the new Morrisville High School gymnasium which is also being used as a temporary auditorium was held Thursday morning. Other rooms in the new Robert Morris High School additions have been put into use as fast as completed.

Part of the assembly hour was devoted to a "pep meeting" for the football game with Hathor High School. The high school bugle and drum corps marched down to the island field from school and paraded during the half-time in the game. A permit for this parade was granted by the town authorities.

Five hundred movable seats have been purchased by the local board of education and this will enable the junior and senior high school departments to meet together without unnecessary crowding.

Dedication of the new additions will take place on October 28 when the local parent-teacher association holds a reception for the teachers in the gym. The program for this affair will be in charge of Mrs. Theodore Hansen, who has arranged a variety of musical offerings, including vocal selections by Mrs. Elizabeth Kaiser, Elizabeth, N. J. mother of one of the teachers in the high school.

The new building additions, besides a spacious gym, are in the form of a three-story wing to the rear of the Clymer avenue end of the original structure.

Because two men had the same name, a peculiar state of affairs existed when one of the two was killed on the tracks of the Reading Railroad a short distance from the Yardley station.

News of the fatality spread throughout Trenton like wild fire that a prominent contractor by the name of Frank Porcelle had met his death. Finally, the news reached Mr. Porcelle's wife, who immediately took steps to make it known that her husband was not the victim. In order to prove her statements, she had her husband speak over the telephone to a well-known newspaper office in the city.

The man killed was another Frank Porcelle, Trenton Junction, a member of a laborers' gang working on the railroad near here. Other members of the gang escaped injury. Porcelle has a wife and two small children. A sister who resides in Wilmington, Delaware, will come to Newtown, to which place the body was taken, to identify it this afternoon.

After Coroner John J. Sweeney, M. D., Doylestown, had viewed the body, he stated that the man died of a fractured skull, the result of having been struck by a train.

After several years of agitation and discussion of the school problem, the New Hope Board of Education has made a definite decision as to the desirable thing to do and is asking the voters of the borough to give it the authority to proceed with the erection of a new high school.

The board asked Mrs. Rhoads to set a price on four acres of land lying on the north side of the York Road in the western part of the borough. The committee proposes to place the new building on the centre front of the piece of ground. There will be sufficient land to afford recreation and sport, including a baseball and football field.

An election will be held in connection with the regular balloting on November 4, to authorize a bond issue of $50,000. Of this total $6,000 is to clear off a present floating school debt and $44,000 is to buy the land and erect and furnish the building, of six, seven or eight rooms, depending upon bids submitted by contractors.

Plans for the proposed school have been drawn by A. Oscar Martin and Son, architects, Doylestown. The plan is for a school all on one floor, with six or more class rooms, office and teachers' room, corridors and vestibules. The building would be of brick, attractively trimmed with limestone and could be enlarged upon easily.

EXONERATE OFFICERS OF KILLING BANDIT

Coroner's Jury Finds Shooting of Pettaccio Was Justified

2 OTHERS EXONERATED

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 11.—At an inquest at the Leator funeral home, Coroner John J. Sweeney, M. D., directed a jury to find that three state troopers who shot a Philadelphia bandit to death last month, committed justifiable homicide.

Corporal William Francis and Privates Peter Greblunas and James McGinn, of the Doylestown sub-station, are the three officers who were exonerated for killing Frank Pettaccio, 26, of Philadelphia, in an attempted hold-up on Lovers' Lane, near Trevoose, off the Street Road.

Pettaccio, together with Sigmund alias "Ziggle" Walczykewski, of Frankford, held up a number of motorists along the Street Road near Lovers' Lane section during the past three months. Walczykewski, now in the county prison, has been identified by at least nine people who claim he held them up.

The bandits believed the police car to contain "petters" on the night the troopers shot Pettaccio. After the bandits had opened fire on the officers, the officers returned the fire, Pettaccio was killed and Walczykewski was arrested the following morning near his home.

"Banditry in Pennsylvania will stop," said Coroner Sweeney, "just as soon as State Police and other officers continue to kill holdup men they catch in action. Pettaccio got exactly what he deserved and Walczykewski is a very lucky man that he did not get the same dose. The killing in this case was certainly justifiable."

The same jury also exonerated Fred E. Strohl, of Bethlehem and B. William Wrigley, of Philadelphia, who were held pending a Coroner's inquest, in the death of Edward Brandt and Raymond Parker, of Philadelphia, who were killed on the Lackawanna Trail, near Neshaminy, on September 9, in an automobile collision.

The jury found that both men died in an unavoidable accident. The two killed were riding on a trailer that was attached to another car. The trailer swerved to the center of the highway when it was struck by a truck being driven in the opposite direction.

Members of the jury included Russell J. Werts, Wilson V. Lagorio, Russell B. Gulick, L. P. Bodley, Raymond Price and Joseph Steelman.

ices for tomorrow: Morning worship at 10:45; Sunday School at 2:30; evening service at 7:45. This being the second Sunday of the month the service will be conducted entirely in the English language. At this service the charter to the Scout Troop will be presented. Robert X. Perry, executive for lower Bucks County, and Commissioner Joseph Burtonwood will make the presentation. It is hoped that all the members of the committee will be present.

USE MANY SUBSTITUTES

By Leon Schiffer

Bristol High won its second consecutive game of the season, defeating Langhorne High yesterday to the tune of 25 to 7.

Coach Townsend started his first string players, and during the game made many substitutions.

Fleet running backs, and hard charging linemen were all at the disposal of the Bristol High eleven, and with these assets functioning in perfect order, the Langhorne boys wilted and were beaten back, offering little resistance.

Langhorne kicked off and Pileo ran the ball up to the 30-yard line. Bristol after several line plunges kicked and Davis, of Langhorne, advanced the ball to the 25-yard line. A punting duel ensued with Leighton having the advantage over Davis. After two or three downs and a steady advance, Leighton ran 45 yards off tackle to score Bristol's first touchdown. Collins added the extra point.

The second period started with the ball on Langhorne's 35 yard line. After a failure for first down the ball was retired to Bristol's side. However, Langhorne's line refused to wilt, and again the Langhorne eleven received possession of the ball. Langhorne again failed to register a first down. At this point of the game, Bristol started an aerial attack which gained yardage until striking distance of the goal. The Cardinal and Gray failed to make a first down on the 20 yard line. A blocked kick resulted in a safety by Bornice which added two more points to Bristol's tally.

The third quarter was a repetition of the first and second periods with Esposito making a safety and Pileo scoring Bristol's second touchdown. Collins added the extra point.

Early in the last period, Leighton in a spectacular end run scored Bristol's last touchdown. Collins again converted the extra point. Langhorne received and advanced the "pigskin" to the 40 yard line. At this stage of the game, Townsend's second team went into the fray. With Davis and Phillips hearing the brunt of the advance, Langhorne finally succeeded in scoring her only touchdown of the game. Davis added the extra point.

The Bristol mentor was well pleased with the hearty spirit of the public which turned out to witness the game. Line-up:

FIRST WOMAN JUSTICE FOR LOWER BUCKS

Miss Betty Kennedy Succeeds
Father as Dispenser of Justice

NAMED BY THE COURT

LANGHORNE, Oct. 11.—The first woman to deal out justice in lower Bucks County will be Miss Betty Kennedy, 40 years old, of this place, who has been appointed as justice of the peace to fill out the term left vacant by the death of her father, Noel C. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy who held the position of justice of the peace here for 20 years, died on September 20th.

The fair justice announced today that she will take up her duties as soon as possible, continuing until her father's term expires. When questioned as to whether or not she will be a candidate for the office at the expiration of the term, she replied: "Hardly."

Miss Kennedy has for a number of years assisted her father in connection with the office of tax collector, and is very familiar with this phase of work.

The woman was born in Langhorne, and has resided here during her entire lifetime. She attended the Friends School, here, when a child, and later pursued her studies at the Friends Central High School, Philadelphia, from which institution she graduated.

For the past two years Miss Kennedy has been acting in the capacity of librarian at the Langhorne Library. This work she plans to continue with.

The late Mr. Kennedy conducted his work at his residence office, and there also the daughter plans to continue with the duties of justice of the peace.

There is only one other female justice of the peace in Bucks County, the other member of the fair sex carrying on her work in the northern part of the county, in Doylestown Township. Miss Kennedy is the second woman to receive such an appointment in Bucks County.

Legion to Hold Meeting To Plan for Hallowe'en

The Legion is again going to sponsor a Hallowe'en parade here and has called a meeting of those who are interested to be held Monday night.

Last year the Legion agitated a Hallowe'en demonstration and it was quite successful.

The committee, this year, will meet at nine o'clock Monday evening and it is urged that all who are interested make an effort to attend, so that the plans can be started at once.

HULMEVILLE

Members of the Sunday School class of the Methodist Episcopal Church of which she is instructress, and a few other friends were entertained last evening by Mrs. Edward Davis at her Main street residence. The affair took the form of an heirloom party, each woman attending taking with her some article that had been inherited. Games were thoroughly enjoyed throughout the evening, as well as radio music. Refreshments were served. The group entertained included 16 individuals.

A bake sale was conducted at the public school house yesterday afternoon and last evening by the third and fourth grades. From the proceeds derived books will be purchased for the library. Miss Janet Lewis is teacher of these classes.

The annual chicken supper of William Penn Fire Company will take place on Saturday evening, November 15th, in the fire station. Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary will serve the menu.

NORTH CAROLINA NOW MECCA FOR TOURISTS

Scores of Attractive Beaches
Along Inland
Sounds

THE TOUR IS OUTLINED

Because of its scores of beauty spots, scenic waterways and climate untouched by severe weather, North Carolina has become a mecca for motoring tourists seeking vacations in Autumn and Winter.

Along the inland sounds that separate the rolling Atlantic from the shores of North Carolina are scores of attractive beaches while a short distance inland are located the famous "southern pine" resorts set amid picturesque surroundings in the "sand hill" district.

The Keystone Automobile Club has outlined an attractive tour through this particular section which is covered in approximately 1361 miles.

"It can be said without boasting that the natural playground facilities in this section of North Carolina are unsurpassed anywhere in the south," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club. "In Albemarle and Pamlico Sound the state has two unparalleled scenic waterways while in Morehead City and Beaufort tourists will find excellent beaches that rival any strand along the Atlantic seaboard. Inland lie Lake Waccamaw and White Lake, delightful resorts passed en route to the famous 'sand hill' district."

From Bristol the tour leads over the Lincoln Highway passing over City Line avenue to Llanarch turn left on Darby road to Lansdowne where a right turn into U. S. Route 1 carries the travelers south through Avondale, Bel Air and Baltimore to Washington, D. C. From the national capital the same highway is followed through Fredericksburg to Richmond. Here a left turn into U. S. Route 60 leads through Williamsburg and the historic Yorktown region to Newport News, where the James River is crossed to Portsmouth and Norfolk. Southward from Norfolk U. S. Route 17 is used across the North Carolina boundary to Elizabeth City, N. C. An alternate route from Norfolk, over state routes 27 and 34 leads through Moyock and the picturesque Currituck Sound region to Elizabeth City.

Shades of Captain Kidd and other bold buccaneers of the old Spanish Main stalk the shores of the quiet inland sounds in this vicinity. From Elizabeth City U. S. Route 17 is followed to Edenton and Edenton Point located opposite each other on the banks of the Chowan River, a tributary of Albemarle Sound. It was here that these desperate sea rangers hid away on many occasions and the gleaming sands in this neighborhood often formed hiding places for stolen pirate treasures. Through Windsor, and Williamston the journey reaches Washington. Here a left turn into state route 19 leads over a winding course through picturesque "sound" country to Swanquarter near beautiful Lake Mattamuskeet and other attractive regions on Pamlico Sound.

Returning to Washington the travelers follow U. S. Route 17 southward to New Bern where another delightful side journey can be taken by a left turn into U. S. Route 70 leading eastward to the coast. This trip leads to Morehead City and Beaufort, two far famed beach resorts of the south. From New Bern state route 17 is followed southward through Jacksonville, N. C., to Wilmington, N. C., a thriving community from which numerous side trips can be taken. From here state route 17 leads westward along the shores of delightful Lake (Continued on Page 4)

The 20th

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 11.—Seven divorces were granted in the Court of Common Pleas by Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer in addition to a vast amount of miscellaneous business that was transacted. A number of plead guilty cases were also disposed of.

The trial list for the October term of civil and equity court was read and marked by President Judge Keller. The session will start Monday morning, October 20. There are forty cases in civil court and eight in equity court.

The following divorces were granted upon payment of costs: Louise Andrews, of New Hope, against Alphonso Andrews, Philadelphia, cruel and barbarous treatment; Frank A. Burness, Croydon, against Anna May Burness, Camden, N. J., desertion; Eleanor W. Rossiter, Langhorne, against William A. Rossiter, address unknown, desertion; Madeline M. Mather, Tullytown, against Ferdinand S. Mather, Falls township, desertion; Alice Elsie McNelly, Bristol, against Robert Lee McNelly, cruel and barbarous treatment; Lillie M. Asay, Bristol, against Howard W. Asay, Camden, N. J., desertion; Mamie B. Long, Wycombe, against Arthur F. Long, Wycombe, cruel and barbarous treatment.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions, petitions of the Bucks County Commissioners were presented asking for the appointment of juries of view to inspect Bridge No. 350 over Three Mile Run Creek on the township road leading west from the Bethlehem pike toward Rocky Ridge in West Rockhill township; to inspect the new laundry building at the Bucks County Home; to inspect Bridge No. 129 over Neshaminy Creek at Castle Valley; to inspect the new dairy building at the Bucks County Home.

In Quarter Sessions Court the return of the special election in Hilltown township school district where a $10,000 increase in township indebtedness was passed was filed.

A petition asking for the appointment of a jury of view to have a portion of a public road in East Rockhill township vacated, was filed in the Quarter Sessions Court.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn presented a number of forfeiture and condemnation petitions in the Quarter Sessions Court asking President Judge Keller to condemn trucks and pleasure cars seized in liquor law violation cases. The cases included the Commonwealth against Vincent Mucci and William Brooks (truck); against an unknown sedan owner; against Fred Meilley (truck); against Thomas Rorer (truck).

A petition for the appointment of viewers to assess damages for taking of certain property in Bristol township, was filed in the Court of Common Pleas.

"THE MAN WE WANT"

Advertisements which include these words are appearing frequently in the papers. They are widely distributed, throwing open the avenues of opportunity to the "right man" wherever he may be. Usually they are addressed to young men, but as ability is sought it is reasonable to conclude that fellows turned 50 who have not lost ambition and possess brains, energy, enthusiasm, ideas and adaptability would not be barred from consideration on account of age. The advertisers seem to want supermen. At any rate they have important work to be done and they announce their readiness to pay generously for the services of those who can qualify.

The significance of these quests for high class men by large business organizations goes far beyond their affirming the truth that there "always is room at the top." Not only is there room, but there does not appear to be anyone capable of filling the vacancies and getting the big money. Not only are there highly desirable places "going begging" in this time of general business depression, but the managers of big business envisage the approach of better times and are making preparations to meet increased demands, enlarge their sales and improve their service.

Verily, these are golden days for courageous youth of America who have also the ability of which business is so much in want. Golden days, notwithstanding the dark background which has so many scared into inactivity. "The man we want" exists, of course. But it is for him to reveal himself and go after the big job that beckons. It is for the men who know themselves, have confidence in themselves, possess the courage to attempt new things, to come forth and pick up jobs worth while.

JINGO PROPAGANDA

"We love to delude ourselves," wrote Goldsmith. We do, and nowhere more than in our interpretation of politics and foreign affairs. People who are simple-minded and trustful in other matters will lend credulous ears to any oracle who rises to explain that things are not what they seem in politics and affairs of state and that international relations are all compact with plot and counterplot. Nothing seems to be incredible when told of politicians.

A perverse imagination twisting the facts does even better when applying the detective faculty to actions and statements by foreign governments. They must never be taken at their face value. That would be both stupid and unpatriotic. One must always look for the sinister purpose behind the fair-sounding words.

Simile: As uncertain as a political prohibitionist.

The ideal way of getting along will never be realized by the idler.

Some women put the enamel on so thickly that they are afraid to smile for fear it will crack.

Many persons do not seem to be ashamed to advertise the fact that they have made a failure of marriage.

The Handsome Man

W. N. U. SERVICE

as he put MacBeth's private and special report in a large and official envelope.

He dusted himself and his hat carefully, threw his working coat across the small room and landed it squarely on the hook he had selected, washed his hands, smoothed down his hair and declared himself ready.

Roberta not being in sight yet, Sir George detained Ray Browne as the latter prepared to go forth and search for the car. "I say, Browne, stay where you are. Miss MacBeth will be here just as soon if you don't run to meet her. I'd like a bit of information about the payroll trouble the MacBeth Construction company has had, either here or at the New York end."

"There was some little rumpus at the New York end. I wouldn't really dignify it by the name of trouble."

"Yet Mr. MacBeth seems to have the wind up about it."

"Funny! Must be because he's feeling a bit low."

Roberta drove forward, and Browne hastened toward her. Sir George took his time. He sauntered past the groups of foreign laborers, taking them all in his survey as a group first, and then patiently trying to memorize a few individual faces. It might be necessary, if there should ever be trouble, to remember some, at least, of the workmen on the inside.

He heard an exclamation and looked up, startled to see Browne rush toward Roberta. Sir George strode forward, he could see that her face was white and that her left hand was covered with blood. He ran and reached her a second before Browne.

"What happened?" he asked, as he put his arm about her and lifted her from the car.

Roberta drew back. "I'm not going to faint. Some one—shooting at rabbits—winged me."

Browne gave an exclamation and bent over the hand which Sir George was examining.

"Flowed across your fingers," Sir George announced. "Painful, but not dangerous. Of course, you have first aid stuff here, Browne?"

"Surest thing you know," Browne told him. "Come along, Miss MacBeth, we'll have you fixed in no time."

Sir George lifted her in his arms, and strode toward the shack, followed by the disgruntled Ray, who was sure he was quite as strong and would have given much to have shown Roberta that strength.

In Browne's office Roberta was placed in a chair and then given a glass of water by Browne, who washed the hand and gave it first-aid treatment. Sir George, who felt he could have made a much better and quicker job of that bandage than Browne, asked Roberta where she had been when she was shot. On receiving her answer that it was on the rough road that led from the main highway to the construction camp, he left with a murmured statement that he would come back in a moment.

Browne raised his eyebrows at Roberta and asked, "What does he think he's going to do?"

"I don't know," said Roberta, who was feeling rather limp. "Probably thinks he can get the man, but he won't. I heard him scramble off among the bushes."

"D—n fool! Might have murdered you."

"Yes, but I don't think that was what he meant to do, and I'm glad he got away. Run along and see that 'Beauty' Sandison comes to no harm. I'm responsible to my father and aunt for him."

Browne did so somewhat reluctantly, divided between the desire to stay with the girl and the feeling that as engineer in charge at this end he must see that he was not left out of anything that the other man started. It was a rotten thing that had happened to the girl, but he could not have Sir George starting any trouble or excitement at his camp.

When he stepped outside, he stepped into practically an empty camp, save for a man on guard who told him excitedly in broken English that the big fellow had taken all the men off the job to hunt the man who had shot Miss MacBeth.

Browne hurried in the direction the laborer pointed out, to find the woods and the old quarry full of foremen and their men. Browne had to admit that this Beauty Sandison knew something about directing men. It was a quiet search, systematically going forward with very little noise or excitement. Sir George came up to Browne with an empty shell in his hand.

"Found this and the marks of a strange car over there," He pointed toward the entrance to the construction road. "Think we might as well call off the men now. If the fellow had a car he's miles away by this time. No use looking for him here."

Browne agreed, and gave the signal for the men to return, promising that he would take care, if anything came to light tomorrow, that Mr. MacBeth was immediately informed.

Sir George went to the car and stood so long before it that Browne, who had been consulting with a foreman, came up to him and paused.

"What next?"

The other man looked at him gravely and shook his head. "I don't want this spread about and I'd just as soon the girl didn't know it either. Look!" He pointed to his coat, which he had left so placed in the car that it looked as though some one was still sitting in it, and then indicated his hat, with which he had crowned the collar of the coat.

From a distance it would look like a man slumped down in the seat with his hat over his eyes. Browne bent over and saw to his astonishment that there were several holes in the hat and when he lifted the coat some small shot rattled to the floor of the car. He looked at his companion in consternation. "No wonder he made such a quick getaway. The fellow must have thought he had killed a man."

"Oh, absolutely!"

They walked without speaking toward the shack where the girl was. Roberta was ready to go.

"Find anything?"

"Only the shell," Sir George said hurriedly, with a warning glance at Browne. "I have it in my pocket. Do you want to see it?"

Roberta shook her head with a little shudder. "I can still drive," she announced.

"Absolutely not. I can manage that car, I'm sure. Your father expects me to drive this road tomorrow, or next day, so I might as well have a little practice now."

Roberta made a gesture to stop him, but he was out of the doorway and striding toward the machine before she could speak. He took the car down and around the narrow turn, and came driving up to the shack, his eyes alight with pleasure. "Jolly good car! Goes like a bird. Hop in, Miss MacBeth, and barring a few mistakes about left and right hand drive, we'll have no trouble at all. But you will have to call off the tea party, Browne."

Browne nodded. Roberta opened her lips to protest again, took one look at the bright head, as he sat hatless before her, and climbed into the car. Sir George held out his hand to Browne.

"See you again soon."

"Sure. You come up any time. I'll be glad to show you about the place whenever you feel like it."

"I'm keen about it," he declared and somehow both Browne and Roberta believed it.

Roberta gave Browne her hand and a few murmured words of thanks and farewell, but few as they were they were cut short by the driver starting the car.

Roberta and her companion went silently toward the island. Whatever Sir George thought about this latest development in their excursion, he said nothing to the girl, giving himself up wholly to the skillful driving of the magnificent engine he had under his control. It was not until he stopped the car at the terrace and turned to her, as though expecting some praise for his driving, that Roberta spoke.

"Have you an enemy here?" she asked and then—as she stared at her amazed—she stammered: "Among the foreign workmen, I mean? Or was it an accident pure and simple that the shot went through your hat?"

"Oh, accident, pure and simple," Sir George assured her. "Nobody about here knows me well enough to hate me that much." He helped her out of the car and watched her go up the steps. Then he whistled, and he said Getting off to a fine start in its first two games, Bristol St. Ann's will battle the St. Cecilia Catholic Club tomorrow on Sullivan's field.

The "Saints" won its two games played by scores of 19-6 each. In each instance the opposing team failed to cope with the locals who as yet have not placed their full strength on the grid-iron.

Last week with six of its first string stars sitting on the bench, the team romped away with an easy victory over the fast Ivy Collegians, a team which can give any eleven in this locality a tough battle.

St. Cecilia needs no introduction to the local fandom. The team played here every year thus far. The Irish boys always gave Bristol A. A. a hard battle and it was not until last year that any local team showed a distinct advantage over the visiting team from the city.

Last season's score was 13-0, but this score does not exactly relate the tide of the battle. Four other times the Purple and Gold had the pigskin in scoring positions but did not push it over. Not because the punch was lacking, but because the Fighting Irish failed to give in and the locals had to be contented with a 13-0 victory.

This Sunday the Cecilia club is coming here for revenge. The taste of that stinging defeat of last year is still in their minds. In fact, it spoiled a good season for the downtown club. According to word received from the St. Cecilia club, Bristol had better be on its toes because it is in for one of the worst beatings it ever took.

The "Saints," however, are going about their business of handling the pigskin in fine style. The first two games took all of the beginning "weariness" out of them and all feel as if they are ready for real action.

The players who were on the sidelines last week already reported that they will be ready this week in another attempt to stop the St. Cecilia team from gaining prestige over a local eleven.

Coach Freddie Pico called practice twice this week and several new plays were given the once-over and worked to perfection. The interference which was going along very satisfactorily was given a little less consideration but the Coach warned the players to keep it up or some team would use it to good advantage.

The weak points of the opening games, that of the defense on forward passes and of breaking the interference of the opposing teams were adjusted in last week's games. In this battle, the visitors only worked one completed pass. Three others tried were intercepted. The Ivy Collegians also tried running the Bristol ends but the interference was easily broken through by the local ends even though Monti, the visiting halfback, was as fast as any back seen here this season.

Coach Pico announced last night that prospects for a Bristol St. Ann's-Kent Tigers game looks very bright, and that negotiations between the two teams are flying thick and fast.

Bristol lineup for Sunday's fray will be as follows: Ends—Roe and Gildard; tackles, Kornstedt and Lasprella; guards, Greco and Daniels; center, Oriola; quarterback, Spadaccino; halfbacks, Daniels and Greco; fullback, Missera.

The game will begin promptly at 3 p. m.

BLUE AND GOLD TEAM TO PLAY SULLIVAN'S XI.

After scoring a brilliant and impressive 6-0 victory over the strong Seyman's Club; the Big Blue and Gold nine will take on "Eddie" Sullivan's all-scholastic team next Sunday afternoon at Eddington.

"Eddie" boasts of one of the best teams he has coached in many years, and has promised Bristol some real opposition. As yet the locals have not been scored upon, and judging from the way the boys are working out under the arc lights up in Harriman these nights, Doylestown, Yardley and some of those other big teams will have to look out for their laurels.

Coach Corrigan sent the team through two stiff workouts this week, both of them being devoted entirely to the hidden ball offense.

"Heavy" Lippincott and "Dom" Dougherty reported for practice Thursday, and with the addition of these men, the locals are given a powerful line and a well balanced backfield.

A light workout will be held Sunday morning at 10 a. m. on the high school field and all of the squad men are requested to be on hand as the new uniforms will be distributed.

MANY ENTRIES FOR AUTO SPEED CLASSIC

LANGHORNE, Oct. 11.—The 100-mile auto race classic at Langhorne Speedway on October 18 has attracted the largest number of championship drivers yet to appear at a dirt track event in this community.

Cummings, who rose to overnight fame by jumping from the "outlaws" to the "AAA" and winning the first championship race here on May 3, now ranks third in the national AAA standings for 1930 and only 2.63 points behind the second place holder. He will again be in the race next Saturday.

Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia, who ranks fourth in the standings; Deacon Litz, fifth-place holder; Frank Farmer, who holds the world's record for a qualifying mile made here July 4 in 37.54, and who ranks ninth, together with Herman Schurch, who piloted the second-place car at both Indianapolis and Altoona, Pa., are all entered in the Langhorne classic.

Bids for Arnold's participation in the Oct. 18 race have been sent out and negotiations now pending expect to be closed shortly which will bring the "baby-faced" Chicagoan and now 1930 AAA champion here to compete against the most formidable dirt track pilots on this continent.

Zeke Meyer, another Philadelphian, and consistent money-winner and Horace Shaw, of Rochester, N. Y., have also entered.

With the Langhorne track in excellent condition new marks may be set. Experts say it is the fastest dirt track in America. Farmer expects to beat his world's record for a mile.

With the 1930 auto racing season nearing its close, grudges, challenges and counter-challenges are being hurled by the gasoline jockeys for the Langhorne race. The race here is being staged by the veteran promoter, Ralph A. Hankinson, whose two previous events gave new life to the Lincoln Highway oval.

The greatest array of drivers in this country will face the starter's flag in what promises to be the "red hot battle of the year" for liberal prize money and new honors.

At present the plans call for the qualifying trials to be run on the morning of October 18 with the 100-mile event to take place in the afternoon. The most efficient officials on the AAA contest board will be on hand to take care of the details. Elmer "Doc" Gerner, one of the best starters in America, will handle the flags.

AROUND THE WORLD TODAY

CROYDEN, Oct. 11.—In the ranks of those awaiting the arrival today of Capt. J. Errol Boyd and Harry P. Connor in the five-year-old monoplane Columbia after its second crossing of the ocean will be one of its first trans-Atlantic passengers, Charles A. Levine.

He flew here from Paris to be on hand for the greeting of the fliers when they land after their forced halt in the Scilly Islands.

"They took an awful chance," Levine declared in praising the fliers. "I knew the old Columbia would get them here, though."

MELFI, Italy, Oct. 11.—A three-second earthquake panicked the population today, without causing any damage.

The slight shock caused hundreds to flee into the open for fear that another catastrophe might occur such as was experienced some months ago, when an earthquake practically demolished this city and scores of other communities in southern Italy, killing and injuring thousands of inhabitants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Captain Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French trans-Atlantic aviators, will sail for Paris October 17, they announced today. The flyers returned yesterday from their nationwide good-will tour.

They will receive the $25,000 award of Col. W. E. Easterwood for their flight from Paris to Dallas, Texas, at a dinner Thursday.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 11.—Liquor made of wood alcohol was blamed today for the death of ten men in the past 48 hours.

Efforts were being made to determine from whom the poisoned liquor was purchased. Dr. Harrison S. Martland, chief medical examiner, said examinations showed all of the victims had been drinking "cheap" liquor.

Five of the dead were unidentified. Police squads searched the city for stills in an effort to locate the source of lethal drink.

Hockey Players Lose 2nd Consecutive Game

By Leon Schiffer

The Bristol High hockey team lost its second consecutive game of the season last Thursday by being defeated by Jenkintown to the tune of 2-1. The game was played at Jenkintown.

Coach Diemer started her first string players, and during the game made many substitutions.

The two teams as a whole were fairly evenly matched and neither team scored in the first half. However, in the second half Bristol seemed to slacken her pace. This was, no doubt, due to the many substitutions which were made. Jenkintown seized this brief respite to score her first goal. Later in the second half Jenkintown again succeeded in scoring a goal.

At this critical stage of the game, however, Bristol's "fighting blood" came to the surface and "Mim"

Rhodes, one of Bristol's most promising members made a goal, scoring the first tally for Bristol.

During the remainder of the game Bristol kept the ball in Jenkintown territory, but failed in adding another goal to Bristol's tally.

Much credit must be given to the remarkable playing of the Still girls, Adela Dowgwilo, "Josie" Dilissio, Olive Whyatt, and "Kitsy" Rhodes, who prevented Jenkintown from scoring many a goal.

Next week Bristol plays its first home game of the season with Ambler as their opponents.

On the Brazilian Front

Opposing forces in Brazil draw near each other, as all signs point to the coming of the worst civil war in South American history.
